JUSTICE TALKS

An opportunity to learn and engage around the most pressing issues facing children

Hosted by Council for Children's Rights

On December 1, 2019, North Carolina Raise the Age (RTA) legislation will take effect; that means that 16- and 17-year-olds will no longer automatically be treated as adults when accused of a crime.

A great deal has changed since the 2017 legislation was ratified, and many myths persist about what raise the age will look like in practice.

We're here to help! Join us at Resident Culture on Thursday, November 7th for JUSTICE TALKS where our staff will help demystify Raise the Age legislation.

Thursday, November 7, 2019
Drop in: 5:00 - 7:00 pm
Mythbusting Discussion: 5:30 - 6:30 pm

Resident Culture Brewing Company
2101 Central Ave., Charlotte, NC 28205

Moderated by:
Emily Tamin, Director of Research & Policy
Michelle Duprey, Director of Children's Defense

ABOUT RESIDENT CULTURE

Resident Culture brews what they like to drink - hop forward IPAs and pale ales, lagers, barrel aged beers, and wild and spontaneously fermented ales. They work with local partners whenever possible to help grow and support our community of artists, creatives, and farmers in Charlotte and throughout the Carolinas.

ABOUT JUSTICE TALKS

Justice Talks are presented by Council for Children's Rights and are a bi-monthly opportunity to engage—and get engaged—in the most pressing issues facing children today.

Can't make the talk, but want to get up to date on the legislation? Be sure to...
