Friends,

If you followed the news at all this weekend, I'm sure you are heartbroken by the reports of sheer devastation that are coming out of western North Carolina. Many of those parts remain isolated without access to food, electricity, and other critical resources. Those impacted will certainly need ongoing support for the weeks and months to come. Our friends and partners at Second Harvest Food Bank of Metrolina have begun hurricane relief efforts to all of the counties that they support and to their fellow food banks in impacted areas.

Those wishing to help on the food front can support Second Harvest, and they will help get supplies to these impacted areas. We will assist SHFB in any way we can. We also are sending supplies (water, snacks, hygiene kits) tomorrow morning on a truckload that Feeding Charlotte is coordinating en route to the Asheville Dream Center.

Nourish Up will continue to support anybody in Mecklenburg County who has been impacted by the storm and those who have evacuated their homes and sought refuge here in the Charlotte area. Our customer service representatives and our social services team have my full support to offer food referrals to anyone who reaches out in our region and needs help with grocery or meal support.

In service,

Tina Postel, CEO
